No, we don't do full scale conferences and conventions at any of our properties.
We're not that kind of hotel.

If you're seeking private and discreet events facilities in Spitalfields, Clerkenwell or Soho, then you need look no further. Our meeting and event rooms are all full of character, furnished throughout with fine old paintings and antiques and are a world away from the corporate norm.

Batty
Langley's
—1724—

An unusual name, for a most unusual small hotel.

The elegant Library at Batty Langley's has a picturesque Victorian lantern roof, flooding the entrance with natural daylight. The opposite end is laid out as an intimate, well stocked library featuring a period stone working fireplace. The entire space is air conditioned and is furnished with comfortable sofa and chairs as well as an antique table seating six or eight.

The Parlour is perfectly suited to an informal, private meeting space.

THE ROOKERY
1764

Our careful restoration of the picturesque row of period buildings that is home to The Rookery has created a haven of calm, complemented by the highest levels of comfort and service.

The Drawing Room is a delightful meeting place for gatherings of up to twelve people. The huge carved mahogany door opens from the boardroom into a sumptuous sitting area, ideal as a breakout or syndicate room.

The Library is an oak panelled room furnished with antiques and period portraits with a table for up to six.

HAZLITT'S
1718

Over 35 years ago we rescued a row of Georgian townhouses in London's Soho. Hazlitt's is now one of the world's best known, best-loved small hotels. Civilised surroundings, old fashioned hospitality, and friendly, efficient service - anyone looking for a private and discreet meeting and events facility need look no further.

The Wardrobe, originally a place of safety for aristocrats' valuables, is now a panelled meeting room for gatherings of up to six.
